Machu Picchu

Machu Picchu is an ancient city in Peru, high in the Andes Mountains. It was built by the Inca people in the 15th century and later left empty. The Spanish never found it, so it stayed hidden for hundreds of years. In 1911 an American explorer, Hiram Bingham, discovered it and told the world about this mysterious place.

The city has stone houses, temples, and terraces for growing plants. It is often called the “Lost City of the Incas.” Today Machu Picchu is a UNESCO World Heritage site and one of the New Seven Wonders of the World. Thousands of tourists climb the mountains every year to see it. Because the place is very popular, Peru has special rules to protect it from too many visitors.

The Great Wall of China

The Great Wall of China is one of the most famous buildings in the world. It is about 21,000 kilometres long and was built more than two thousand years ago. At first, the wall was made to protect the country from enemies. Later it also became a way to control trade along the Silk Road. People could travel safely because soldiers stood on the wall and watched for danger. The Great Wall goes across mountains, deserts, and rivers. In some places it is built of stone, in others of earth and wood. It is so wide in some parts that five horses can walk side by side on it. Today the Wall is one of the most popular tourist attractions in China. Millions of people visit it every year. Scientists say it is the longest structure ever built by humans, and astronauts have even taken photos of it from space.
